

Aphorisms:
Literature in 160 characters or less

If there are feathers in a pillow then it logically bespeaks that there are bells in a telephone.
With uvulas.

-Philip Kobylarz

Lemon I stole from a neighbor's tree (they weren't using it) was excellently tangy with fat, wide seeds, which will spawn more trees, more thieves.

-Philip Kobylarz

View of grandeur from a high window: into other windows.

-Henry W. Leung

mom's funeral so much depends on creases still deep in my palms from her

-Henry W. Leung

Edacity
Biting off more than you can chew means never going hungry.

-Ryan Fitzgerald

Day Break
Get up to hold each shard against the sun or purchase warm regards for nightfall.

-Rich Murphy

Moral Hazard
The way in the Adam Smith Dealership:
upon impact envy and empathy buckle.

-Rich Murphy

Definition of a skeptic: A person whose wish to believe does not exceed his wish to be certain.

-Charles Rafferty

The wake of a crippled swan is symmetrical.

-Charles Rafferty

the fifty thousand golden statues have drowned by now

after a thunderstorm the tall sea glistens with underneathness.

-Eric Weiskott

The Mathematician Composes an Equation while strolling home in a Thunderstorm
The odds of being struck by lightning are

-Eric Weiskott

In the early Days of Lexicography
In the early Days
Of lexicography Which presupposes which

A giant little oyster
At home in itself.

-Eric Weiskott

Garden Gnomes: III
III.

Starlings shiver in the stone recesses
of aged, fissured
mermaid breast.

-Kate Falvey